

Have you seen billboards like this in your neighborhood? →

These advertisements are for anti-choice organizations, known as "crisis pregnancy centers" (CPCs). CPCs often pose as legitimate health centers, but frequently misinform, mislead, and manipulate women facing an unintended pregnancy about their reproductive health care options.

Want to know more? Then join us on January 11 at Cedarhurst Unitarian Universalists for a free screening of the HBO documentary, *12th and Delaware!

CPCs are not new. They have been in operation for decades, growing their ranks to 4,000 across the country – including more than 40 in Maryland.

Cedarhurst Unitarian Universalists and NARAL Pro-Choice Maryland Fund are excited to present the award-winning film, 12th & Delaware, which follows activity on a quiet street corner in Florida where a women's health clinic stands across from a CPC. Join us for a free, public screening at Cedarhurst Unitarian Universalists followed by a discussion. The film doesn't take a position on choice - it starts a conversation.
